For many years, a radio storyteller known as "Frank the Radio Dude" would broadcast from his bedroom on his portable radio in a tiny backwater of the Bay Area. He would tell the stories of the great American west, usually using a whole bunch of props as he went along. These were classic radio storytelling tricks: a Stetson, a six-shooter, a trail map and a fictional character called "Jesse", who was always telling the story just as you, the listener, would be hearing it. The listeners would call in to request the next Jesse story, and the radio guy would give it to them. That's as much as I know of the man who I often call "the original radio storytelling genius" but his full name was certainly not Frank Horstmann, who was born in 1919, and he died in 2000. He was also not a human, and not a dude. His final radio broadcast was made as the WW2 Battle of Britain was ending, and is preserved for posterity here.Â· .

Dear Manh, I wish I could have told you on the phone, but something always comes up. I have, however, composed this radio story for you, and this is for you to play as soon as possible. . You will have to listen to it a couple of times, and then you may give it one more listen, to make sure you understand everything about the radio story.

Okay? A little background: My name is Frank Horstmann. I was born in 1919 and I'm a lady. I was a Broadway chorus girl what a nice joke and I was married to Frank. We had two sons, Frank Jr. and Fred. I'm a radio storyteller and, although I have been good for all these years, I'm getting a little crotchety, so I'm thinking of retiring. When I was a girl, I used to hear a lot of talk about a baseball team that went around the country telling stories from the World Series. They called themselves the Boston Braves. They're long gone now, but I never forget them. We had two sons, Frank Jr. and Fred. I'm a radio storyteller

it. Chapter Section Subsection Subsubsection Paragraph Sentence Depending on the language and its part of the document, I would like to display different parts of it. Chapter: Danish, English Section: French, Spanish Subsection: English, French, Spanish Subsubsection: English, French, Spanish Paragraph: Danish, French, Spanish Sentence: English, French, Spanish I could of course manually insert `\section{English}` and its kind of things, but I'd rather use a more automatic way. (Perhaps xelatex and xetex know some tricks for this?) I am using XeTeX, and the language switching is done via the babel package.

A: You can manually insert any commands with `ewcommand`, like this:

ewcommand{\cj}[1]{\@currenenvir #1}
```

```
ewcommand{\cjhe}[1]{\@currenenvir #1 \hfill
\textbf{English}}

Now you can use them like this in your document: `\cj{Section}` `\cjhe{Section}` Of course, this will probably end up looking awfully unbalanced. Perhaps you could either get a prettier layout by combining all your English and Spanish text into one section, or manually divide your text between English and Spanish.
