retroarch-bsnes is a popular homebrew, menu-based, game emulation frontend. It features a RetroArch systray integration, to make it easy for the user to change emulators in the application's bar, and nearly any fullscreen emulator can be used, with icon support for the frontends and any non-fullscreen option that can use a systray item (eg. smoplayer). bsnes hd: Fullscreen, vector-art based, super-smooth, the bsnes hd frontend by Dimitri Fontaine is a true game-changing frontend. It has autorunning support, menu-based control, and has some nice little touches like icon support, a menu for performing actions in-game (like edit layout), and support for multiple languages, and once you have it running, you never want to run anything else. What is libretto? RetroArch is a frontend, so when a game or some system usage is done in that game, a frontend which does that processing is required in order to show that usage to the user. But not all frontends are the same, and as those frontends are created, the features that they are adding to the RetroArch experience are the things that retrocore uses to distinguish itself as its own category. The RetroArch categories are: -Media -Source -Game Emulation -Other The other category is all of the other frontends that you have to install in order to run the games you want, and they may not necessarily be system-level frontends. -Media You have access to your storage, network, and any system devices like an AC adaptor, Bluetooth adapter, etc. -Source This is all the applications you already have installed on your system, such as media players like VLC or Kodi. -Game Emulation This is where games are installed. -Other This is where frontends with non-game-related features are installed. The libretto cores are things that provide, in addition to the above, a 'core' or 'library' of functionality that all frontends could make use of. A core allows you to retro-experience a game, while removing the busywork and redundancy of running frontends,

Make a Killing is a first person survival horror game of exploration, thrills and tension set in a real world environment. You take on the role of Cole, a man traveling to a secluded labyrinth in search of his brother Jace. Jace has been running a "pay to play" adventure throughout the forest for gold; mining for precious ores, treasure hunting for buried caches, and exploring for loot. It was a win/win situation for Jace, but a lucrative delusion for him; as the ores always came out too small or of no value. Jace had always been blinded by his desire to extract as much wealth from the land as quickly as possible. One day, Jace went missing. After a day of searching, Cole learns of an abandoned mine with rumors of an unknown creature that lives there. After exploring the mine, an unknown force propelled Cole out of the mine and into a dark, hidden underworld. Playing his life on the line, Cole sets out to escape the labyrinth of Ira King, a mad man hellbent on killing anyone inside the labyrinth. As the nights draw in and sunsets fade, the Votaries begin to step in to the underworld. Horned beasts that devour their prey whole, they hunt their prey to make their sacrifice to Ira King. To appease their madness, one must be sacrificed to Ira King to put his atrocious plan of mass murder to stop. The game has 3 main quest lines; the Gold Rush, the Haunted Mine and The Votaries; each with their own incredible characters, storylines and gameplay twists. (One-Eyed Hyenas song) The Moment of Silence is a song originally performed by Swedish indie pop group One-Eyed Hyenas. Written by the band's lead vocalist and guitarist Peter Dahlgren, it was recorded with long-time friend and Swedish producer Anders Kinnvall at his own studio, Alligator Studios in Malmö, Sweden. Although Kinnvall had been briefly involved with creating the music of One-Eyed Hyenas, his input into the sound of the finished song was minimal, aside from adding drums and additional synthesizer. The final version was recorded in a studio in Stockholm, with the exception of drums; professional session drummer Niklas Flyckt and band drummer Stephen Weiner contributed these, using Ludwig Drums and Evans drumheads. The song was included in the EP Chasing Clouds, which was made available for digital download as a free download. Many critics noted that the piece paralleled classic English rock and pop arrangements, although the classically trained Dahlgren was never averse to experimenting with musical styles. It was the first album to use the Polar Bear Club alias, used for the first time on The Moment of Silence, and was written about a relationship Dahlgren was having at the time of the album's writing. The title is a quote from poet George Moore, who wrote "What I did not like was a moment of silence, as though the world were dead". They first performed the song on live television in Sweden when they appeared on Sommarlov on August 25, 2007 and were immediately met with applause from the audience. The Moment of Silence was played at two One-Eyed Hyenas shows during the band's 2007 Sommerkonsert tour, and was the only song from the EP included at any of the shows. Background and development One-Eyed Hyenas was formed in 2004 by Peter Dahlgren, who had played music for more than twenty years as a member of several bands and solo artists. He had previously worked with and composed music for the Weeping Willows and Madiamals; he went on to develop an interest in silence, and would often meditate at midnight and lie in a park in Malmö to be silent for hours. At the time he started in One-Eyed Hyenas, Dahlgren was taking on various compositional responsibilities for other artists, and was primarily a vocalist, with no aspirations to be a producer. Dahlgren became a friend of Nil Lund
