I've also got another.rar in there with no.txt extension. EDIT: I'm using Nero 12.7 trial version with a 64-bit system. A: RAR files do not support arbitrary extensions, they are RAR archives. rar x filename.rar and unrar x filename.rar both extract files named filename. To extract a file called filename.txt, unrar e filename.rar should work. Emanuelle Lhévinne on film, film sociology, and the quest for a new form Despite the fact that she was a pioneering figure in the early days of film, from 1911-1919, one of the most frequently listed among the "masters of cinema," few academics have done much to study Lhévinne. I will be drawing on in my study of her work at least two books by her students from the 1930s, Jean Cocteau and Yvonne Bilzerian. This talk argues for the importance of Lhévinne to film theory and historiography in a number of ways. First, Lhévinne is noteworthy for the centrality of film to her work as a radical social theorist, especially of "historical cinema." She was involved in the Russian film movement and in association with the film writer Germaine Dulac, she is credited with developing a method of "temporal cinematography" that concerned itself with the movement of individual objects through time, a methodology that was to have a profound impact on the development of film as a social form. Lhévinne's work on film amounted to a critical, utopian development of Marxist film theory. She rejected the idea of an aesthetic (visual) cinema, arguing that it was a bourgeois form of filmmaking that emphasized the most spectacular aspects of film. Lhévinne was also a major figure in the emerging feminist movement of the 1920s. Her film The Mysteries of Paris, which featured a character called Dusé, the Parisian mannequin, was the first film to foreground women in the political economy of the city. It was meant to represent the impact of the new cinema on the fictional city of Paris. As such, it also provides a significant early account of a utopian form of the city that would become the subject of later work of Yolande Bessoff, a work that I will also draw on in my presentation. Bilzerian argues that Lhé
