An honest-to-goodness smartphone that would be made by HTC, and would have an advanced "dual core" processor at its core. We have a lot of ideas about how the G2 would take the form factor, but what about the next T-Mobile G2? There's been no word on what the carrier will do with the rumored phone. Now that we have that blank slate, let's take a look at the future of the T-Mobile G2. In our opinion, the G2 is going to be one hell of a phone. So what do we know so far about the new G2? 1. There will not be the G2. The carrier has shown no interest in a "true" G2, and it looks like the next step in the T-Mobile G2's evolution will be a more and more capable feature phone. 2. HTC's new device would come with a slide-out QWERTY keyboard. HTC Crap Load Considering that the G2 would come with a larger display than the G1 and Nexus One, we can expect the new phone to have a slide-out QWERTY keyboard. It would be a real
